Man charged in stabbing after bar refuses him entry

Downtown drama. A Newton man allegedly attacked people outside Coogan's before fleeing in a cab.

A Newton man allegedly stabbed a person and punched another after he was refused entry into a downtown Boston bar early Sunday morning.

Peter Damelio, 38, was charged with assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon. He is due in court today.

Police said officers were called to Coogan's at 191 Milk St. just after 12:30 a.m. for a report of a stabbing. When officers arrived they found a man in his 20s being attended to by bar staff. He was suffering from a stab wounds to his torso and was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital with serious injuries.

A second victim told officers that Damelio and another man tried to get into Coogan's earlier, but that the man who was stabbed told them they had to wait in line. The men went back in line but returned later. That's when they tried to cut the line, but were denied access again.

The second victim said that's when Damelio punched him in the side of the face multiple times, pulled a knife, lunged at the other man and stabbed him, according to police.

Witnesses told police that Damelio fled in a cab. Officers put out a description of the suspect and cab, which were located later in Charlestown. Police said a knife was found on the cab's floor by Damelio's feet.

A woman who answered the phone at the bar said a manager was not available to speak. A police spokeswoman would not confirm whether the two victims were employees of the bar.

Water break means shows don't go on

Boston Fire crews man the water break on Sunday. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A popular Theater District venue was forced to cancel multiple shows on Sunday after a water main burst.

An 8-inch water main ruptured at about 11:30 a.m. Sunday sending water spilling down Warrenton Street near the Charles Playhouse, according to the Boston Fire Department.

Crews were unable to shut off the water for hours and required a backhoe to come in and dig up the street so that the flow of water could be turned off. The water was eventually turned off just before 2 p.m.

While no water flowed into the building, the lack of water pressure caused by the break meant that the Playhouse had no working sprinkler system and no working toilets. That led to the cancelation of multiple Blue Man Group and Shear Madness shows, the fire department said.

Scores of people could be seen standing outside the venue shortly after the announcement was made that the shows would not go on.

The main that ruptured was a low-pressure main used for toilets, sinks and running water.

Roads in the area were closed while crews worked to repair it. The flood also caused some of the street to rise up and become even with the sidewalk in some places.

MBTA crime. Alleged cop assailant arrested at Jackson Square T stop

Ciulla / TRANSIT POLICE

An East Boston man who is accused of assaulting a police officer was arrested Thursday for a careless mistake that, according to Transit Police, wanted men and women often make on the MBTA.

Transit Police on patrol at Jackson Square station in Jamaica Plain said they spotted Jason Ciulla, 33, allegedly evade fare around 2:30 p.m. by "piggybacking" behind a paying customer. When officers approached Ciulla to issue a ticket, a background check revealed that he had three warrants out for his arrest.

Not only was Ciulla wanted for assault and battery on a police officer, according to police, he also had warrants out from two Boston courts for alleged shoplifting and a drug violation.

Police said they also issued a citation for Thursday's fare evasion.

Fair warning

Transit Police have issued warnings to alleged criminals on their blog, advising them that if there is a warrant out for their arrest, they should expect to be arrested for petty crimes, such as fare evading, loitering or smoking in non-designated areas.

Hate crime. Racist graffiti found on school football player's home

Police are investigating an incident that led to a gathering to "stand against the hate" after racist words were spray-painted on the home of a 13-year-old Lunenburg High School football player.

A gathering to support diversity was scheduled for Sunday night in Lunenburg.

The parents of Isaac Phillips woke up Friday morning to find a hateful message spray-painted on the foundation of their home, according to the Sentinel & Enterprise. The message said "Knights don't need n——."

Phillips plays in the Lunenburg High School football program, home to the "Blue Knights."

Police are investigating the incident and said in a statement that they have also notified the district attorney's office and the FBI about the hate crime. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Presents are pouring in for Tony's Metro Magic

Giving spirit. Our generous readers are writing in about their donations to our toy drive for kids in need.

Josia DuBose, 4, plays with his gifts. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Gifts have started to arrive at the Metro offices in New York, Philadelphia and Boston for Tony's Metro Magic, and our generous readers are writing in about their donations.

Metro's annual holiday toy drive for children in need is done in conjunction with Toys for Tots and the U.S. Marines.

It was formerly overseen by our beloved editor-in-chief, Tony Metcalf, who passed away in July from cancer at age 50. Metro Magic was an initiative that he held dear to his heart, and we've renamed the event in his honor.

Quoted

"Good luck with the rest of the wish list. It is a wonderful gesture that you are doing." Joann Farda

Here are just a few notes from some of our generous readers who have donated gifts to needy children this year.

"I just wanted to thank you for running this drive and letting us know in the paper. I donated a Let's Cuddle Elmo ... because what kid wouldn't love that?!" TOM AREVALO

"I would like to donate these toys on behalf of my sons Christopher and Brandon Minott. I wanted them to know we can help others and make other children happy. Thank you. I am so grateful I could help other children." BERNICE HUDLEY

"I wanted to give a shout-out to Metro and the Marines for doing a wonderful thing at the holidays. Keep up the great work. I hope the children have a merry Christmas." NAME WITHHELD

"It was so easy to do, and I hope more people will help out. A few clicks and it's done and coming to Metro's office. I feel good knowing someone's going to write in a One Direction diary and some little one is going to be playing with a new toy car soon. Thank you for making this donation such an easy process. Best of luck with the toy drive." LIZ

What to give

Metro is collecting new, unwrapped gifts, not clothes.

- Things like action figures, dolls, board games and sports toys, like a football, are always good.
- And don't forget about older children, ages 11 and up. Older children would love to receive an MP3 player, a makeup kit or a poster from their favorite movie this year.
- Spending $10 on a toy for a child can make a difference.

How to take part

Tony's METRO MAGIC

1 Look for the Tony's Metro Magic logo on our website, Metro.us.

2 One click on the logo will take you to a "Wish List" we have set up via a secure link on ToysRUs.com.

3 Once there, you can see all the toys we've already requested for kids, and more are being added daily. Simply select the toys you want and purchase them. That's it! Selecting only the toys on our Wish List ensures that all the gifts will be shipped to our offices.

Let us know!

If you donate, email us at charity@metro.us letting us know what you gave and we'll shout out a "thank you" in the paper.

Pelosi denies Democrats from Obamacare retreat

Pressure. Obama said insurers could extend existing policies for a year even if they don't comply with law.

The top Democrat in the House of Representatives said on Sunday that her party would not abandon President Barack Obama's landmark health care reform law, despite unrelenting Republican opposition and emerging signs of market turmoil for consumers and health insurers.

Two days after 39 House Democrats joined Republicans on a bill aimed at undermining the law known as Obamacare, House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi denied that Democrats have lost confidence in Obama's ability to overcome a botched rollout of his signature domestic policy achievement.

"There's a lot of whoop-de-do and ado about what's happening," Pelosi told the "Meet the Press" program.

"It doesn't mean: Oh, it's a political issue, so we're going to run away from it. No. It's too valuable for the American people," she said, claiming similar numbers of Democratic lawmakers have joined Republicans on votes that challenged Obamacare in the past. REUTERS

Day 11: Temp enters a universe of pain

It was a Quentin Tarantino standoff where everyone holds up a gun at everyone else, except there weren't guns, just words and emotions. The Danimal looked at Kyle and then at Sarah and hissed. "You cradle robber."

Sarah shot back, "What about you, Dan?" Referring to moi.

"I'm only here with Shannon to talk business."

"Yeah right, cowboy."

Danimal walked up closer and that's when Kyle slugged him in the gut — well, more like where your gut touches your rib cage. It sounded like a kettledrum and Danimal fell to the floor shouting astonishingly unprintable things at Kyle and Sarah, who up and left.

"What is wrong with that kid!" shouted Dan, "Oh my God, the pain!"

"Thanks for accusing me of spying," I said.

He coughed. "Shannon, take me to emergency. I think I'm going to die."

We went to his BMW where he curled into a ball in the passenger seat while I drove.

I said, "I really shouldn't be doing this. You're mean."

"Just take me to Crown Permanente."

"Oh. Going to the rich peoples' hospital are we?"

"Please drive."

We arrived and Danimal hobbled out of the seat and into Emerge, an oasis of calm with tastefully matched fabrics and gentle lighting. There was a copy of Modern Symphony magazine on the walnut-inlaid coffee table. We went to the desk where a supermodel was moonlighting as a nurse on duty.

Dan groaned, "I need an X-ray. Quick."

"Of course, sir. I'll need to take an imprint of a credit card. We accept all major cards."

Danimal looked in his pockets. "Oh jeez, it's in the pocket of the jacket that went out for dry cleaning today. Just let me in. I'll bring it tomorrow. I'm totally insured."

I could see that our supermodel had been through this many a time. "I'm sorry, sir, but without an imprint of a valid card with the correct credit limit, I'm afraid there's nothing further we can do."

"I —" He was speechless.

"Welcome to my world," I said. "Get back in the car. I'll take you to St. Eustace."

"That's in the worst part of town."

"What's your point?"

So we drove off to St. Eustace. "It's just a slug in the gut, Dan. How bad can it be?"

"He broke something. Or damaged my heart. I can tell. Oh my God, the pain!"

We pulled up to St. Eustace, which resembled the battle-ravaged Vietnamese village remains in part three of "Full Metal Jacket." A conga line of sick and wounded people stretched out the front door and into the street. One quick wardrobe change and you'd have "Les Misérables."

"I can't go in there," Danimal said.

"It's either that or nothing. Want me to take you home?"

"No!"

"OK, then join the line."

Baldwin uses hate speech, threatens to quit acting

How can someone with adorable dogs like these drop an f-bomb?

Alec Baldwin is doing major damage control after he was caught on tape calling a photographer a gay slur as he chased him on the streets of New York on Thursday, a controversy that resulted in the suspension of his MSNBC talk show. But as the actor asserts in a Huffington Post editorial, the real problem still hasn't been addressed.

"In Bloomberg's New York, 40 or 50 paparazzi are allowed to block streets, inconvenience homeowners, workers and shoppers, and make life miserable for my neighbors," he writes. "Photographers have tripped and fallen on babies in strollers on my block. ... They provoke me, daily, by getting ... close to me with their cameras as weapons, hoping I will react."

And if the paparazzi don't stop, Baldwin may take his acting ball and go home. "If quitting the television business, the movie business, the theatre, any component of entertainment, is necessary in order to bring safety and peace to my family, then that is an easy decision," he writes. Are we to excuse his hate speech because his wife was almost hit in the head with a mic? That doesn't compute in my head. Does it in yours?

Talking point

Affleck and Bale know Batkid is best

Ben Affleck is getting ready to suit up as Batman for "Batman vs. Superman," but he's smart enough to know when he's been bested.

After the Make-A-Wish Foundation helped transform San Francisco into Gotham City Friday for the benefit of 5-year-old cancer patient Miles Scott — who quickly became known as Batkid — Affleck took to Twitter to show his support. "Batkid. Best Batman ever," he posted.

And Christian Bale also noted his support. "It's so touching," he said in an interview with Vulture. "Wasn't that fantastic?"

Miles Scott (aka Batkid) captured the Riddler with Batman during Scott's wish to be a superhero on Friday in San Francisco.

Moms' day

Famous friends

Comedians like Kathy Griffin, Eddie Murphy and Joan Rivers all appear on camera, singing their praises of Mabley. Goldberg says that industry pals of hers were at first a bit hesitant to speak on the comedian, but that once they opened up "you couldn't stop them from talking."

"One of my favorites is Sidney Poitier," says Goldberg. "We see Sidney talk about coming from the island, coming to Harlem and not really understanding what Moms was talking about when he saw her, but he felt like he was comfortable with her. ... He recognized her in his soul as being like the woman he knew from the island he had come from. You would never think of things like that or how people see you.

"She was very influential to a lot of people, and it knocked me out to discover it."

Moms is the word for Goldberg

TV. Why Whoopi wanted to bring the story of Moms Mabley to the screen.

"Whoopi Goldberg Presents Moms Mabley" premieres Monday at 9 p.m. on HBO. / HBO

Even if you've won every big award in show business, it doesn't guarantee you'll be able to finance a movie on your own.

Whoopi Goldberg — who has won an Oscar, a Grammy, a Tony and two Emmys — turned to Kickstarter to fund her new documentary, "Whoopi Goldberg Presents Moms Mabley."

After the initial surprise of her fundraising efforts wore off, Goldberg says donors "lost their minds and just gave and gave and gave." And she's grateful for that outpouring, she says, because, with the money, she was able to hire an editor who would benefit the film most.

The doc is a labor of love for the 57-year-old star, who says she had wanted to make a film about Jackie "Moms" Mabley for a long time. She says she used to impersonate Mabley — known for her commentary on race and other taboo topics — early in her own career as a comedian. But years later, when Goldberg wanted to reprise the role onstage, she realized her audience didn't know the trailblazing comedian.

"Folks of a certain age remember her but don't know a lot about her," Goldberg says. "But [younger] folks don't know about Moms. ... One of the things that you discover when you're looking for black performers is there's just not a lot of information out there. ... There wasn't anyone documenting any of it, and no one has done the full Ken Burns rendition of black people in America as a documentary. So that's what I think the next thing I want to do is, so that the next person who's maybe looking for someone like Peg Leg Bates can go to one of those documentaries that I'm hoping we get to do and say, 'Oh, here's some information I can use.'"

Mabley died in 1975.

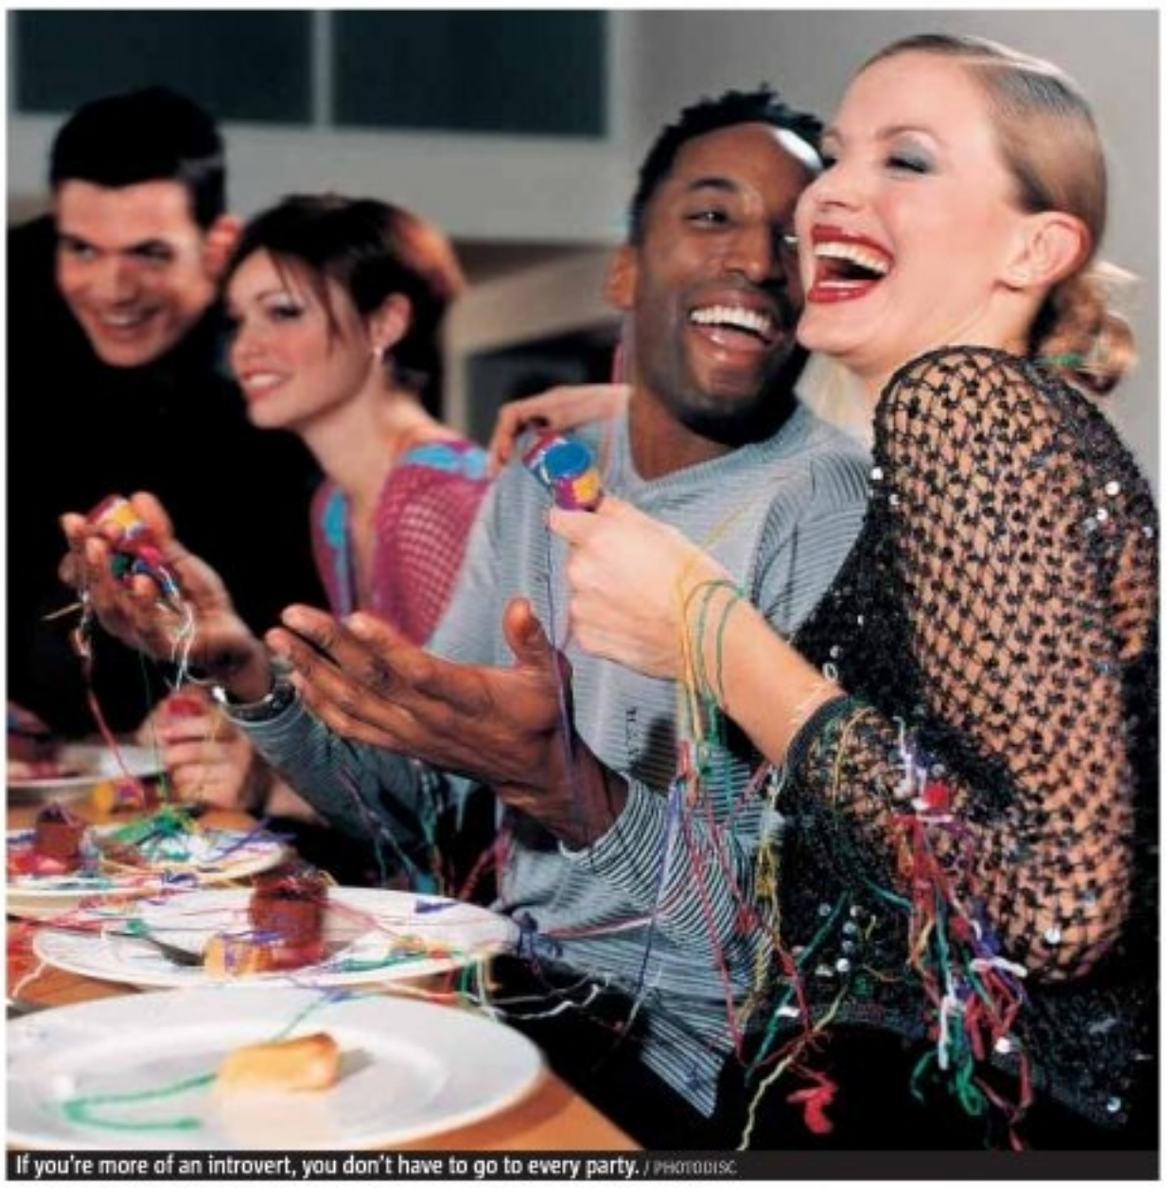
IT'S AN EXTROVERTED WORLD, BUT THAT DOESN'T MEAN INTROVERTS CAN'T THRIVE

I'm a bit introverted and often envy my outgoing friends. I want to connect with people, but I often feel overwhelmed at parties and would rather sit in a cafe and have a meaningful conversation. Any advice?



If you're more of an introvert, you don't have to go to every party. / PHOTODISC

Introverts get a raw deal in American society, which tends to encourage and reward extroverted behaviors — for example, talking versus listening, gregariousness versus introspection and the pursuit of happiness versus the search for meaning.

But there is nothing wrong with being a quieter, more reflective person. In fact, research suggests that pushing yourself to act against your natural disposition may actually be more harmful than helpful.

Generally speaking, introversion is defined by a preference for solitude, reflection, introspection and the search for meaning. According to the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator personality classification system, half of Americans are introverts — but you wouldn't know because, well, they don't stand out as much. Introversion and extroversion occur along a continuum; some people are more introverted than others. It's even possible to feel like an extrovert on some days and more like an introvert on others, especially if you are in the middle of the continuum. And the brain is elastic, so it's possible to grow more introverted or extroverted as one ages.

Introverts are sometimes (but not always) shy, and they usually seek out more intimate social activities. You're likely to find both introverts and extroverts at a party. But while extroverts may float from one person to another, growing more lively as the night progresses, introverts will usually seek out meaningful conversations with one or two people and head home early, having had their fill.

There's a scientific reason for that. Research on brain activity suggests that introverts take in more information than their extroverted counterparts and need quiet time to digest all of their observations. That's why they prefer to charge their batteries in solitude and feel depleted by lots of stimulation. Because they absorb more stimuli and process it more deeply, introverts often feel overshadowed by their more outgoing peers in professional and social situations.

Like you, many of my introverted psychotherapy patients express a sense of inadequacy or shame because they don't feel they are living up to American ideals. They feel pressured to "be happy" by being fun and social when, in actuality, meaningful experiences give them a far greater sense of peace and satisfaction. I often explain to them that America has a strong cultural bias toward extroversion (think football). But this is not true everywhere. Some Southeast Asian and northern European countries favor such introverted qualities as silence, humility, privacy and restraint.

Since we're not living in Southeast Asia, here are some things you can do to thrive as an introvert in an extroverted world.

Quoted

While extroverts may float from one person to another, growing more lively as the night progresses, introverts will usually seek out meaningful conversations with one or two people and head home early, having had their fill.

Four tips

1 Pay close attention to what kinds of people and situations increase or drain your energy. Choose to engage in as many activities that increase your energy, and minimize participation in those that deplete it. Don't push yourself to do things you don't enjoy just because you feel culturally pressured to do so.

2 Honor and respect your needs. Find ways to interact with friends and colleagues that work for you. At work, introverts often do better expressing their ideas in emails or one-on-one interactions than large meetings because they don't have to compete for the floor and can take the time they need to think through and express their complex thoughts. Socially, seek out one-on-one conversations or create group situations that encourage meaningful sharing.

3 Honor your unique contribution to a group. An introverted client of mine recently expressed her admiration for a fellow student's outspokenness in class only to find that the colleague equally appreciated her quiet confidence and thoughtful remarks.

4 Let go of shame and envy. Comparisons only drain self-esteem and precious energy. There's nothing wrong with you, and the world could use more really good listeners.

Women may have harder concussion recovery than men

After a concussion, women tend to have worse symptoms than men. That's the case even when athletes were injured playing the same sport, according to a new study of young soccer players.

Some recent studies have found gender differences in memory and other symptoms after concussions, with women generally doing worse.

The new results support findings that women take longer to recover than men, said Tracey Covassin. She led the study at Michigan State University in East Lansing.

"Results from this study may impact sports medicine clinicians on being more cautious when returning female concussed soccer athletes back to participation," Covassin told Reuters Health.

"Moreover, health care professionals need to be aware that females could report more total concussion symptoms compared to male concussed athletes," she added. REUTERS

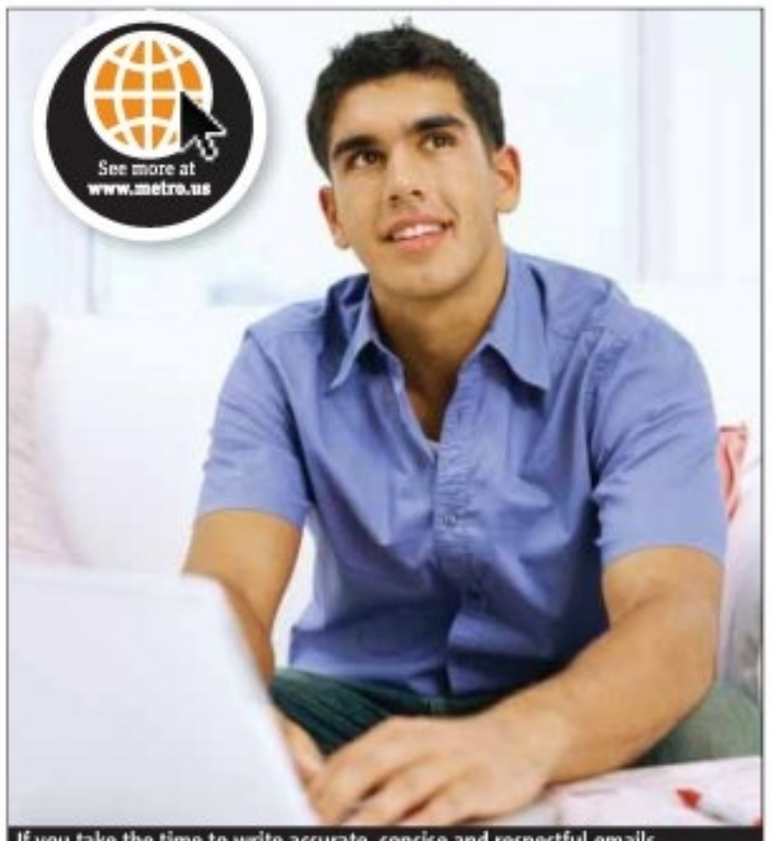
Email you can build a career on



If you take the time to write accurate, concise and respectful emails, you will be perceived in a better light and will likely receive more positive and helpful responses. / STOCKBYTE

No LOLs. Email is often your first impression, so make sure it shines.

Everyone has received an email lacking a salutation or sign-off and only a meager attempt at capitalization, grammar or sentence structure. If these habits continue when a sender enters the workforce, he or she will find that unprofessional emails can have a negative impact on career prospects.

Here are some things to remember when managing your email:

Err on the side of formality

Professional emails should include accurate punctuation, capitalization, sentence structure, grammar and spelling.

If you aren't sure how to address someone, start with the most formal option, e.g., "Dear Ms. Smith," and wait for the reply to determine how to address further correspondence. For professional communication, emoticons, abbreviations and slang acronyms like "LOL" are too informal. Also, stick to the basics and avoid the use of wallpaper or colorful fonts that are distracting and slow down the receiver's ability to process the message. Stick with a basic serif font, such as Times New Roman, or Arial, the standard sans-serif font.

Reread messages before sending

This allows you to check the tone and content of the message from the reader's perspective and enables you to catch mistyped words that will not be caught by your spellchecker. An articulate, concise and accurate email tells others that you are intelligent, professional and detail-oriented.

Organize

Keep your inbox clean. Use electronic folders to archive messages that you may need to refer to in the future. Keep the inbox for current items that you need to deal with. This will help you feel organized and less stressed.

Deal with it

Don't waste your time by reading an email and then leaving it to sit because you don't feel like answering it, only to have to return to the same email later. Have a one-touch policy for each email: Open it, answer it and then delete or file it.

CLAIRE TATTERSALL

Pro tip

Insert the receiver's address last

This ensures that you do not accidentally send an incomplete email or leave off an attachment. This is particularly important when dealing with a sensitive topic. Better yet, if a topic is sensitive, go and talk directly to the person in order to avoid a misreading of your tone or intent via email.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Put more thought behind your actions. You may feel the restless need to make a change, but you must only do so for the right reason and without introducing force.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. Get in the groove and make things happen. Your enthusiasm will spark interest and allow you to stay in control of whatever situation you face.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. Listen and respond carefully. Giving in to demands will not help you take care of your responsibilities. A change in the way you handle pushy people will be necessary.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Emotional matters may disrupt your plans. Make allowances for individuals who are facing uncertainty, but don't take a backseat. Be brave and bold and move forward with your plans.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. A last-minute change of plans will work in your favor. Avoid anyone trying to push you in a direction you don't want to go.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Take responsibility for your actions. Be ready to call the shots and make the changes that suit you best. Partnerships will be held together through courage.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Your sudden leap to action in defense of a situation or individual will capture attention and bring you good fortune. Be true to your beliefs and carry on.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Sit tight and do what suits you, not what others suggest. You have more control than you realize, so you must shy away from making an impulsive move for someone else's benefit.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Gauge what's going on around you before making a move. You must take care of business first to ensure no one gets in your way when it's time to play.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Take your place in the spotlight and call the shots. Promote your beliefs and drum up support. Your strength of character will attract both personal and professional interest.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. A personal relationship or domestic situation must not be allowed to dictate what you do. A change may be in order, but it has to be what works for you.

US should give health care to the world

Re: 'The buck stops with Congress' (Metro, Nov. 14) Letter writer Mike Mace would have us believe that "illegals" don't deserve health care coverage. I simply wish to remind him that contagious diseases don't care about the immigration statuses of the people they infect. The only fix for our immigration challenges today is to recognize that we are all world citizens, and that economic, political and social exploitation all depend entirely on a system that chooses not to grant either a legal status or basic human rights like health care coverage to all people as world citizens.

GLENN ALPERIN, VIA EMAIL

Weight isn't the same as health

I find the idea of penalizing employees who are overweight unfair. Some folks who are overweight are very healthy and some who are thin have multiple health problems. If there are penalties to be levied, then they should be according to the number of health problems one has instead of the number on the scale. People who are overweight are penalized and ridiculed because society still thinks it's OK to do so.

ANN SANDHORST, VIA EMAIL

Not all Iranians think the same

Re: 'Keep peace with Iran' (Metro, Nov. 15-17) A helpful hint for letter writer Mary Allen: If you want people to think you have a realistic view of how the world works, don't start a letter with "I voted for Obama." I was in college when the Iranian hostage crisis took place, and there were a few Iranian students at my school. Those aren't the Iranians who hate the U.S. and want to acquire nuclear weapons. Patriots 'ER'

Dennard, Gregory ruled out

The Patriots will take the field Monday night without cornerback Alfonzo Dennard (knee) and safety Steve Gregory (thumb).

Primetime challenge

NFL. The Patriots face their stiffest test so far this season in Cam Newton and Carolina.

Cam Newton and the Panthers haven't lost a game since Oct. 6. / GETTY IMAGES

For the second straight Sunday, Patriots fans had to make due without their team. But they'll all be rewarded Monday, as the Patriots (7-2) take on the Panthers (6-3) in North Carolina (8:40 p.m., ESPN).

The Panthers are the hottest team in the NFC, having won five games in a row. Quarterback Cam Newton, while not putting up the crazy fantasy football numbers he has in the past, has his team on a path to the postseason despite having started the year 1-3. Can the Patriots halt the streak? Here are three things to look for:

1 Managing Newton
After throwing three interceptions against the Arizona Cardinals on Oct. 6, Newton has thrown a total of three interceptions in the five games leading into Monday night's game. The Panthers have scored 30-plus points in four of those five games, and have also won those same four games by more than 14 points. But even with all those points, Newton hasn't amassed 250 passing yards in any of them. The Patriots should have Aqib Talib back and that should make things tough on Newton.

2 Is Carolina truly that good on defense?
It's a good thing the Patriots have Rob Gronkowski and Danny Amendola back healthy. They may even have Shane Vereen back, too. They're going to need them all. The Panthers rank second in the NFL in rushing defense and fifth in the NFL in pass defense. Carolina has benefitted from getting ahead early in the game and owning time of possession.

3 Bye, bye week
Under Belichick, the Patriots are 10-3 after the bye week, and 9-1 over the last 10 seasons. They're also 5-1 on the road after the bye week. Since 2010, they're 24-1 in the second half of the season, too. Not to say that what happened in 2004 has any bearing on this season, but the point is Belichick and the Patriots will be more than prepared.
